Planet on course for 2.7°C rise in temperature: Report

Agencies

A report by the Climate Action Tracker project has found that current policies adopted by countries have put the temperature rise on track for 2.7C. This is despite the pledge world leaders have taken as part of the United Nations Climate Change Conference, commonly known as COP, with its 29th session currently underway in Azerbaijan's capital city of Baku.

The expected level of global heating by the end of the century has not changed since 2021, with "minimal progress" made this year, according to the Guardian which cited the Climate Action Tracker project report. The consortium's estimate has not shifted since the Con26 climate summit in Glasgow three years ago in 2022 were the result of the 13C of global heating the world has seen so far. At the higher temperatures that are projected for the end of the century, the risk of irreversible and catastrophic extremes is also set to soar.

"We have clearly failed to bend the curve" said the lead author of the analysis, Sofia Gonzales-Zuñiga, from Climate Analysis.

Meanwhile, at COP 29, according to Reuters, economists told countries that developing nations need at least $1 trillion per year by the end of the decade to cope with climate change. Setting the tone at the start of Thursday, a report from the Independent High-Level Expert Group on Climate Finance said the target annual figure would need to rise to at least $1.3 trillion a year by to climate stability," the report said. Behind the scenes, negotiators are working on draft texts, but so far early-stage documents published reflect the huge range of views around the table

Any deal is likely to be hard fought given a reluctance among many Western governments - on the hook to contribute since the Paris Agreement in 2015 - to give more unless countries including China agree to join them. The likely withdrawal of the US from any future funding deal will raise pressure on delegates to find other ways to secure the needed funds.

Christian groups in Mumbai have objected to the titles in a book series called 'Sex Bible, for sale on the e-commerce site, Flipkart. On its part, the company has said that it will pull out the advertisement if it is perceived as An NGO, Watchdog Foundation - which has complained to the Maharashtra police, the chief minister and the chief secretary - said the title of the books had hurt the religious sentiments of the Christian community. "Such insensitivity displayed by Flipkart, one of India's largest e-commerce platforms, is unacceptable. As a corporation operating within our country's legal framework, Flipkart must be held accountable for allowing such content to be published and promoted on its platform," the group, Watchdog Foundation, said in its letter to government authorities.
